

PHYSICIAN HURT
IN BAD RUNAWAY

Dr. J. R. Lazenby of Vallonia Thrown From Buggy When Horse Makes Quick Turn.

STRUCK HEAD AGAINST BOX CAR

Was Rendered Unconscious, And is Suffering From Severe Internal Injuries.

Dr. J. R. Lazenby was seriously injured this morning in a runaway accident at Vallonia. He had driven his three daughters to the B. & O.
S-W. station, as they were intending to return to their homes near Cincinnati after attending the family reunion which was held at the Lazenby home Sunday.

After his daughters alighted from the buggy, Dr. Lazenby started to get into the buggy again but just as he placed his foot on the step his horse became frightened at a box car standing on the siding and ran away. Dr.
Lazenby was unable to jump or to climb into the buggy but held to the lines and made an effort to stop the horse but was unsuccessful. In passing a box car the horse made a sudden turn and threw him up against the car with much force.

It seems that no one near the depot witnessed the accident. Dr.
Lazenby was found lying near the car
a few minutes later but was unconscious. He was taken to his home where medical attention was given, and it was found that he had a number of ugly wounds upon his head and was also badly bruised about the body. It is feared that his skull was fractured but he was in such a condition today that a close examination could not be made. It is also believed that he is suffering from several internal injuries.

Shortly after he was taken home he regained consciousness, but became unconscious a second time later in the day.

His daughters were at the depot at the time the accident occurred and knew nothing about it for some time afterwards. On account of his condition they postponed their trip and returned to the home of their father.

TRIBUTES PAID TO THE HEROES OF '61.

Annual Memorial Services for G. A.
R. and W. R. C. Are Held at The St. Paul Church.

HONOR GIVEN THE VETERANS

Service in Memory of Deceased Members of Court of Honor Held at First Baptist Church.

Memorial services were held at nearly all of the churches in this city yesterday. The services for the G.
A. R. and the W. R. C. were conducted at the St. Paul church in the morning. A large number of the veterans and their wives attended in a body.

Rev. H. R. Booch delivered a strong address. He said that Memorial Day always brought a thought of sadness and sorrow, for the living were taken in thought to the lives of their deceased friends and relatives. He pointed out that it was right and proper that the memory of the gallant soldiers, who fought so bravely during the years of '61 and '65, should be annually honored by the people throughout the country.

The speaker said that if it were possible a wreath made of three flowers should be placed at the head of every grave. In entwining this wreath, he suggested the use of evergreen, signifying Eternity; the lily, God's providence; the Forget-me-not used in the remembrance of the Savior.

He said that the death of a friend or relative was witnessed by the greatest of sorrow but that the chasm between the lives on this earth and future lives was bridged by the evergreen of man-memory. The great work of the G. A. R., while serving as soldiers for their country, will not be appreciated to its fullest extent until after the last veteran has answered the final call of the bugle. The deeds of a hero are not given the honor they deserve until after death, the speaker said, and this will be true of the great army of brave soldiers who fought so courageously for the preservation of the union. He pointed out that the life of a soldier was unselfish, that he was willing to enlist, endure the hardships of army life and even face death for the benefit of his friends and his country.

The Rev. Mr. Booch said that the veterans should not give all their time in counting their past victories but should continue to help conditions and to live for the sake of their fellow men. It was here that he suggested the use of the lily, the second flower, to be woven in the wreath.

In speaking of the third flower, the forget-me-not, to be used in preparing the memorial wreath, the Rev.
Mr. Booch stated that much of the soldier's life had been overlooked and that he had a very important place in making the nation what it is today.
He should be remembered as a soldier who was willing to leave his family and his home to get out upon the battle field and fight for his country. He also paid a tribute to the wives of the soldiers, who so bravely passed through the hardships of the war and who with difficulty kept the family together while the husband was upon the field of battle.

The church was decorated in keep-

PRESIDENT TAFT
STATES POSITION

Chief Executive Will Not Intervene in the Rebellion in Cuba.

FIVE SHIPS TO KEY WEST.

Marines Were Sent There Only to Protect the Interests of Americans.

Washington, May 27.—President Taft today sent a message from Jersey City, N. J., to President Gomez, of Cuba, saying he would not intervene in Cuba. The message followed a protest from Gomez against American intervention.

In his message to the Cuban executive the President said that the sending of American marines to Cuba at this time is for the purpose of protecting American interests only. The state department feels assured that President Gomez has misunderstood the purpose of the American government in dispatching the large naval force now on its way to Key West, and has instructed American Minister Beaupre, at Havana, to make plain to the Cuban government the purpose of the movement. The state department has left to the discretion of Colonel Karmany, commanding the marine forces en route on the cruiser Prairie and due at Guantanamo tomorrow, the extent to which the marines shall be employed.

It is believed that as soon as President Gomez understands that there is no sinister purpose behind the movements of the naval vessels and that their commanders will do nothing more than use their forces to prevent injury to American lives and property, he no longer will object.

THE PULL THAT PULLS.

"I have no pull."

That was what my young friend said when I advised him to apply at a certain place for a job.

"I don't say to him what I thought."

What he had a pull—a tremendous pull. He had a pull on his own strength and persistence and skill and on the respect and patience and push.

He was asking special favors. Did he know the danger of specific privilege?

Nine times in ten there is a string tied to such preferences.

Beware of the pull, young man. You are expected to return exceptional favors extended to you. And when it comes to trading favors what guarantee have you that you will receive as much—or more—in the exchange?

He who grants you one concession is likely to ask of your civility two in return.

Besides—

In the main attitude of him who asks no preferential chance beyond that he merits there is great force. To him who succeeds of himself there comes a sense of self respect that never comes to him who courts the smiles and aid of others.

"I have no pull."

The expression, which is all too common, reveals a habit of looking for exclusive privilege that is wrong in principle and vicious in practice.

Equality of opportunity is of the substance of democracy. No man has the right to demand more than a fair chance and an open field.

No pull?

Why should you receive some extraordinary friendship denied to others? Why should you be excused from requirements for which others are made to pay?

The pull that you use may become the pull back once you exercise it.

The pull that pulls?

Merit! Merit alone!

When you pull that string something must move. When you pull that string the other end of it is not to be found in the hands of some other than you.

Flagged Train With Shirt.

Tearing his shirt from his back an Ohio man flagged a train and saved it from a wreck, but H. T. Alston, Raleigh, N. C., once prevented a wreck with Electric Bitters. "I was in a terrible plight when I began to use them," he writes. "My stomach, head, back and kidneys were all badly affected and my liver was in bad condition, but four bottles of Electric Bitters made me feel like a new man." A trial will convince you of their matchless merit for any stomach, liver or kidney trouble. Price 50 cents at The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind.

YOUR GRAY HAIRS QUICKLY VANISH

A Harmless Remedy, Made from Garden Sage, Restores Color to Gray Hair.

A feeling of sadness accompanies the discovery of the first gray hairs, which, unfortunately, are looked upon as heralds of advancing age. Gray hairs, however, are not always an indication of advancing age, for many people have gray hairs quite early in life. Of course, it is unnatural, and indicates that there is something wrong with the individual, and that Nature needs assistance in correcting the trouble. The same is true of hair that is constantly falling out and becoming thinner every day. If everything is right with Nature, the hair, even in comparatively elderly people, should be long, thick and glossy, without even a streak of gray.

The ideal assistant to Nature in restoring and preserving the hair is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a clean and wholesome dressing for daily use. It not only removes dandruff, but strengthens weak, thin and falling hair and promotes its growth. A few applications will restore faded or gray hair to its natural color.

Get a bottle to-day, and let it do for you what it has done for thousands of others.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special Agents, Andrews Drug Co.

THE COOK.

Which of the happily married couple should be the cook, assuming that the income of neither is sufficient to warrant the hire of such a necessary piece of household furniture? The question has come up before the Chicago courts and they have met it with courage, or one of them has. It seems that one Burt Harkin was charged with disorderly conduct, says the Charleston News and Courier. He had, in fact, been drunk. This he admitted, but claimed that the circumstances were of such an extenuating nature that he ought to be discharged. "For some time," said he, "I've been taking care of our house and cooking meals for my wife and myself. The work was uninteresting and it got on my nerves. I was mighty glad to get a drink and forget my troubles." The judge looked wise. "Discharged," said he laconically. A number of questions naturally arise. But the salient point is the cooking. Is there really any reason under the sun, except custom, why the man should expect his wife to be the cook? It is not recorded that Eve dressed the beef, but we do know that Adam roasted her just after the exodus from the Garden of Eden. Here was a man who plainly did not go out and work for an income. Why should he loaf about the house while his wife attempted to economize on gas? To be sure he got tired of it, but probably she was just as tired. We really fear that the judge has set a bad precedent. Suppose the women take it into their heads that they have a right to get intoxicated just because they get tired of frying codfish.

The Yonkers judge who decided that the woodpecker has the right to ply his vocation of tapping the trees in early morn, no matter whom he wakes, indirectly gives his sanction to a whole lot of sleep-disturbers. The cock's shrill clarion, the quacking of the ducks and geese, the squealing of the pigs and the barking of the dogs all get license from this judicial declaration. Incidentally as newspaper comments indicate that the defendant woodpecker indulged this habit as early as 4 a. m., a woodpecker who drills for worms at that hour during this season of the year must be a night hawk.

Possibly a few supersensitive souls may suffer at the cruelty attendant upon the slaughter of flies now being urged, but the fly is one of the busy little pests that bring a swarm of evil upon us and a vast amount of discomfort. Its extermination is problematical, but inasmuch as this is an age when exercise is extolled let the swatting go on with vigor.

A woman in New York intends to sue a doctor who performed an operation on her because he sewed up inside of her a towel a yard long with a red border and marked with the name of the hospital where the operation was performed. Such carelessness with good hospital laundry ought to be looked into. It is hardly a degree less culpable than kleptomania.

A Pittsburg physician declares that the human race will gradually extinguish itself. Another expert holds that the quantity is too far in excess of the quality. In the meantime, the race is going on enjoying itself or making itself miserable, as usual, and probably will continue to do so long after conflicting theories and theorists are forgotten.

The man who preferred an auto to a wife may or may not have made a wise choice. Both are sometimes difficult to control, the cost of maintenance is high in either case, though, of course, the auto can be shut off at will.

A young man who steals from his employers for the purpose of providing a pleasant honeymoon for his chorus girl bride may mean well, but it will have to be admitted that he is misguided.

A Harvard professor says that housework will make over a fat woman into a Venus. But in these emancipated days women cannot be lured back into the old paths of domestic servitude by such transparent bait.

A postmaster up in Maine has resigned because, he says, he is ninety-two years old. Evidently he is growing too old to read the gossip on the post cards.

"Do you remember what Pittsburg looked like twenty-five years ago?" asks a newspaper of that city. Aren't there enough disagreeable things to think about without that?

LONG STRUGGLE OVER

Methodist Episcopal Contest Concluded on Twenty-Sixth Ballot.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 25.—The quadrennial conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in session at Minneapolis completed its selection of eight new resident bishops when Dr. Wilbur Patterson Thirkield of Washington, D. C., was elected to the episcopacy on the twenty-sixth ballot. The conference had been balloting for bishops more than a week, with practically all the work at a standstill in the meantime. The election of Dr. Thirkield had been practically a certainty since the withdrawal from the race of R. E. Jones, colored, the candidate of the negro faction.

Rev. Franklin M. Leete of the Detroit conference and Rev. R. J. Cooke of New York were elected to be bishops on the twenty-third ballot and twenty-fourth ballots respectively.

Because of the great amount of business yet to be transacted the conference voted to make next Wednesday instead of Tuesday the date of final adjournment, as previously decided.

WOMEN'S PROTESTS ENTERED TOO LATE

State Department Powerless to Act In the Matter.

Washington, May 25.—The request of Mrs. Belmont and other prominent suffragists to prevent the extradition of Maria Puriz, a German girl charged with murder, on the grounds that she is the sole woman passenger on the vessel already conveying her across the Atlantic was referred by state department officials to the department of justice.

The petitioners, among whom was also Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, asked Secretary Knox to send fast cruiser to overtake the vessel on which is Maria Puriz and remove her from it. The girl was placed on the German tramp Excelsior at Philadelphia on Tuesday, and the suffragists allege that she is the only woman among forty-eight men passengers. The vessel is already on the high seas and no battleship will be sent in pursuit.

The reference of the matter to another department is recognized as a polite way of shelving the matter because of the impossibility of anything being done.

A WORD WITH WOMEN

Valuable Advice For Seymour Readers.

Many a woman endures with noble patience the daily misery of backache, pains about the hips, blue, nervous spells, dizziness and urinary disorders, hopeless of relief because she doesn't know what is the matter.

It is not true that every pain in the back or hips is trouble "peculiar to the sex." When the kidneys get congested and inflamed, there are many such aches and pains and the whole body suffers.

You can tell it is kidney trouble if the secretions are dark colored, contain sediment; the passages are too frequent or scanty. Then help the weakened kidneys. They can't get well alone.

Doan's Kidney Pills have brought sound backs and new life and strength to thousands of suffering women. They are endorsed by thousands—endorsed at home—Read this Seymour woman's convincing statement:

Mrs. George Cozine, 24 Mill St., Seymour, Ind., says: "My back is a great deal better since I used Doan's Kidney Pills and the pain across my kidneys has disappeared. My kidneys have also become normal and the other symptoms of kidney complaint have disappeared. I consider it no more than my duty to advise other persons afflicted with kidney complaint to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

REBELS ARE READY FOR ANOTHER FIGHT

Orozco's Men Not Badly Demoralized, After All.

El Paso, Tex., May 25.—The federals failed to follow up the rebel retreat to Corralitos, as if substantiating the rebel claim that the federals themselves suffered heavily in the fighting at Rellano. Offsetting the federal claim that the rebels lost 600 men or more, the rebels claim not to have lost more than 100, and declare that they are ready for another fight.

The rebels were not so badly demoralized as appeared on first report. They claim to have lost none of their cannon. "We cannot all have victories," said Orozco. "The federal cannon fire was superior to ours and our ammunition was short and the heat was terrific. These incidents led me to withdraw my men."

"As the situation now stands we expect the federals to be cut off any time from their base of supplies at Torreon by the cutting off of the railroad and telegraphic communication between these two places by the forces of Campa and Canales, who are in the vicinity of Torreon."

In case they fall further back the rebels say that Bachimbo, forty-six miles south of the city of Chihuahua, probably will be the scene of the next combat.

CUBA PROTESTS AGAINST FLEETGomez Sends an Open Letter to President Taft.

HE WANTS TO BE LET ALONE

Island Executive Objects to American Haste in Dispatching Vessels of War to Cuban Waters and Says His Government Is Ample Able to Cope With the Situation and Will Put Down the Revolt in Ten Days.

Havana, May 27.—Some of the Cuban newspapers are greatly angered over the dispatch of warships and marines to Cuba, especially the sending of a gunboat to Nipe bay to protect the huge American interests there. These papers praise the letter of President Gomez to President Taft protesting against this action and declaring that Cuba was able to cope with the situation and that he would be able to put down the revolt within ten days.

General Estenoz, the negro rebel leader, has issued a manifesto proclaiming himself president and General Ivolet commander-in-chief. He has adopted the tactics of the late General Maximo Gomez by threatening to burn the sugar mills unless the owners pay large sums of money within seventy-two hours.

The negroes burned the barracks of the rural guards at Magresillos, a village near Santiago. Reports from Santiago say that the federals are about to attack General Ivolet's entrenched position in the hills of Ramon De La Syaguas in the Guantanamo district. General Ivolet has 1,500 men, who are said to be well armed and supplied with ammunition. The total forces in Santiago province is about 3,000. Of this number it is thought that about 1,200, under command of Colonel Mendieta, are facing General Ivolet. All the Cuban revenue cutters have been ordered to Santiago to prevent the possible landing of filibusterers from Hayti, Jamaica and San Domingo. The situation seems to be very serious, especially if the negro plan is to divert troops to Santiago and then start an uprising here in Havana, which is practically defenseless. Americans are hoping that some of the warships will come here.

Although it is officially declared that the rebellion has been suppressed in Santa Clara province, bands reappeared at various places on Sunday and there were several skirmishes with the rural guards. The rebels burned a bridge on the Guantanamo branch railroad. A train from Guantanamo to San Luis, carrying rural guards and passengers, was fired on by the rebels, but there were no fatalities. The passengers on the train say they saw three distinct, large bodies of rebels between Guantanamo and San Luis. Rebels everywhere in the troubled region are looting stores, but are giving vouchers for what they take. These vouchers are signed either by Estenoz as president or Ivolet as commander-in-chief.

GEN. MONTEGUADOCommander-in-Chief of the

BY BRUTAL ASSAULTLone Woman Beaten and Then Dipped in Tar.

Ocean City, Md., May 27.—A gang of thugs, claiming official protection, dragged Mary Holzman, an unprotected woman, from her home in Ocean City, showered blows and kicks upon her face and limbs and concluded their brutal performance by dropping her into a vat of tar in the presence of her eleven-year-old son, who struggled to prevent the outrage. Never has Worcester county been more stirred than it is today over the action. Terrorized by her experience, the woman has quit the town. She is now being sheltered by Tom Jones, a negro, who lives out in the country three miles.

Although the officials of Worcester county seem to have given evidence that they would be perfectly willing to have the whole incident blow over without taking action they realize that this cannot be done. Sheriff Hanson, acting under instructions of State Attorney Johnson, visited Mrs. Holzman at the Jones home, where it was arranged that she should be taken under protection to Snow Hill, the county seat. She demands an investigation, saying she is the victim of a most brutal assault.

Mrs. Holzman says the men who assaulted her were fishermen. She was known in the community as "Red Light," and resentment was aroused against her because of the charge made that she harbored colored men. She declares that there is absolutely no truth in the report and maintains that the offensive epithet applied to her is entirely unjustified. The sheriff declared that she had been treated worse than a dog and says the occurrence is the most outrageous that has ever occurred in this community.

ness of Situation.

NO THOUGHT OF INTERVENTION

The Dispatch of Thousands of Marines and Half the Atlantic Fleet to Cuba Doesn't Necessarily Mean That We Are Going to Take Over the Island, Washington Says, but Is Merely a Precautionary Measure.

Washington, May 27.—Conditions in Cuba appear to Washington authorities as far from reassuring, with more than a thousand stevedores and lightermen on strike in Havana, throwing many more men out of work by creating a shortage of imported supplies, and the negro insurrectionary movement continuing in resistance to the government forces. Despite the acknowledged seriousness of the combined insurrectionary and strike situation, it was authoritatively declared that there is no present intention to intervene, the dispatch of nearly 3,000 marines and half of the Atlantic battleship fleet to Cuban waters being merely a precautionary measure to look after the protection of American interests.

The state department has received a report of the battle between the troops and insurgents in the Guantanamo district Saturday. Consul Halladay at Santiago reported there was considerable firing, but that he had been unable, owing to crippled communication, to learn the definite result. Mr. Beaupre, the American minister at Havana, stated that there were rumors that an engagement had taken place in Oriente province, but that no definite information was obtainable owing to the character of the country in which the operations were being conducted.

The Cuban government is not opposed to the action of the United States in taking prompt precautionary measures for the protection of American interests. This is clearly indicated in the reply of Secretary of State Sanguly to the note of the state department notifying him of the dispatch of the Paducah to the Cuban coast.

If Commander Mitchell of the Paducah finds the situation on his arrival justifying it, he will rush bluejackets ashore just as bluejackets and marines have been landed in Central American countries during disturbances in recent years.

While authorities are eagerly awaiting news as to developments in the eastern part of the island, they are strongly apprehensive of the strike situation at Havana. The stevedores and lightermen walked out early Sunday morning in accordance with their ultimatum, according to a dispatch from Minister Beaupre. As a result of this an army of laborers will soon be out of work, furnishing an additional menace to the situation.

BIG FIGHTING FORCEUncle Sam Dispatches Formidable Fleet South.

New York, May 27.—Responding to rush orders from Washington to proceed forthwith to southern waters, Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, arriving with the cruiser Washington off Tompkinsville Sunday morning, almost immediately raised anchor and steamed for Hampton Roads. As the flagship was preparing to put to sea tugs arrived from the Brooklyn navy yard with marines gathered from all nearby posts and set them aboard the battleships Missouri, Mississippi, Ohio and Minnesota. At 2:25 o'clock the big fighting ships had left quarantine behind and less than an hour later were going full speed past Sandy Hook.

It is understood here that other ships of the line will join at Hampton Roads and that all will proceed to Key West, where there will be a mobilization with other ships already in Cuban waters. The officers who are to command them have been drawn from every post along the Atlantic from Port Royal, S. C. to Portsmouth, N. H. Every available marine has been taken and the men go prepared for field duty. The marines had been ordered to report in heavy marching order, and when they lined up on the parade ground every man had a Burnett-Mercedes rapid-fire rifle with him. These rifles are of the newest type used by the marines and will discharge 400 shots a minute.

Mt. Vernon, Ind., May 27.—As the result of being struck by lightning the large general store of O. P. Lamor was destroyed by fire with a loss of $15,000. The building and stock were partially insured.

Launch Party Drowned.

Washington, May 27.—Eight persons, two of them women and two girls, were drowned when an excursion boat ran down a gasoline launch in the Potomac off Alexandria Sunday night.

Dan Davis, a negro, was burned at the stake in the streets of Tyler, Tex., after he had confessed to assaulting a white woman.

A FATAL AFFRAY IN A HORSE TRADERS' CAMPWhisky and a Woman Lead to a Tragedy.

Linton, Ind., May 27.—Perry Morgan, thirty-six years old, a horse trader of Indianapolis, is in St. Anthony's hospital at Terre Haute at the point of death as the result of an altercation in a horse traders' camp about two miles north of Linton, and George Presley, about thirty-five years old, of Paducah, Ky., is held in a local jail as his assailant.

Morgan was shot about the face and head, one of his eyes being destroyed. The affair took place in a camp of about half a dozen women and as many men.

According to Daniel Presley, father of the accused man, whisky and woman were the causes that led up to the shooting. He said that his son George had been living with Marie Morgan, a sister of Perry Morgan, but that they had never been married. Morgan visited the camp, he said, and tried to induce his sister to leave with him. A neckyoke, an ax and a shotgun are said to have figured in the fight.

Working Nights to Make Up Time.

Columbus, Ind., May 27.—Ten days ago there was but little ground broken for corn in Bartholomew county, but the farmers are now crowding a late spring forward by working with lanterns in their fields at night and corn planting is well along. Some of the farmers who own automobiles have taken the lamps from their machines, placed them on their corn planters and, with the aid of boys with lanterns to guide them, are planting corn after night.

Masonic Home Movement.

Indianapolis, May 27.—The grand lodge Free and Accepted Masons of Indiana, which convenes in its ninety-seventh annual meeting here tomorrow, is expected to decide on the site and to provide for the immediate erection of a Masonic home. The home is nearly financed, and in view of the sites offered by various cities the grand lodge undoubtedly will select a site at the annual meeting.

No Thought of Declining.

Washington, May 27.—Senator Elihu Root says that he has no intention of declining the temporary chairmanship of the national Republican convention at Chicago. He made it plain also that he will not be forced into declining by any threat of a fight upon him by Colonel Roosevelt's friends.

Empty Bottle Gave Evidence.

Fort Wayne, Ind., May 27.—The body of a man, probably twenty-five years old, believed from letters found in his pockets to be Joseph Freeman of Toledo, was found along the Lake Shore track near Waterloo. An empty acid bottle and terrible burns about the face and throat indicated suicide.

Sisters Claimed Remains.

Laporte, Ind., May 27.—The body of William Kane, formerly of this city, who fired seven bullets into the body of his wife at Kalamazoo, Mich., and then sent a bullet into his own brain, was brought here for burial. Four sisters living in this city claimed the remains.

Mothers' Congress.A FAR-REACHING MOVEMENT

This National Organization, Now Having Branches in Thirty-Six States, Has Proved a Source of Genuine Moral Uplift, and Women Leading Movement in Indiana Believe There Is a Fine Field in This State.

Indianapolis, May 27.—A number of well known local women and others representing various parts of the state have interested themselves in the project and a movement has been launched to organize an Indiana branch of the National Congress of mothers. A call has been issued for a meeting at the Y. W. C. A., June 6 and 7, to form the organization. Mrs. Orville T. Bright of Chicago, a vice president of the national organization, will speak at the session. She will explain the work of the congress and tell of its far-reaching effect. Other well known women will speak.

The national organization has branch associations in thirty-six states. It was organized sixteen years ago and was founded by Mrs. Theodore W. Birney and Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst. National sessions are held every third year at Washington.

Prominent among the committees are those on education, juvenile courts, children's literature, child hygiene, child welfare legislation, playgrounds, good roads and rural child welfare and numerous others of a similar nature.

The national organization has proved a source of moral uplift in the states in which it has branches. Persons interested in the organization of the local branch believe it will become a vital factor in the life of Indiana.

SEYMOUR A RAILROAD CENTER.

Seymour is one of the best railroad centers in southern Indiana. The main lines of three roads, the B. & O. S-W., the Pennsylvania and the C. T. H. & Southeastern pass through the city and afford unexcelled freight and passenger service. Besides these we have also two excellent interurban lines; the Indianapolis, Columbus and Southern and the Indianapolis and Louisville Traction system. By these lines Seymour is made the center for trading and shopping for the people living within a wide radius of the city.

The roads give Seymour excellent freight service which proves a great advantage to the manufacturing plants located here and also to the large number of local shippers. Being in direct line with Indianapolis and Louisville, Cincinnati and St. Louis and all the intermediate points, Seymour manufacturers have an advantage in making quick shipments, as they have a direct route to the principal cities of the United States. The excellent railroad service which is enjoyed by Seymour means much to any manufacturing firm and is a strong feature as an inducement in locating additional factories for the city.

Besides the excellent freight and passenger service and the advantages from the manufacturers point of view the railroads are a valuable asset to our city from the financial standpoint.

Seymour is the division point for the B. & O. S-W. and a large number of the railroad employees have their homes here. Besides being a division point, the principal offices of the company are located here, and a good number of the officials and their assistance are residents of Seymour.

This is also a terminal of the Southeastern and for both of the traction lines, and a large number of the Pennsylvania employees reside here. These men draw good salaries from the various railroads, which is expended with local merchants. The value of the railroads is readily seen at the time the employees receive their checks, as thousands of dollars are distributed among the dealers at that time.

From time to time there have been various rumors regarding the possibility of constructing an additional interurban line through this city paralleling the B. & O. S-W., and our citizens should make every effort to have the proposed road located here in case it should be built.

These roads are a valuable assistance in the upbuilding of the city, and have an important place in the making of a greater Seymour.

DEMANDS LARGE ALIMONY

Mrs. Laura Ella Ruddick Asks for $25,000.

The divorce case of B. S. Ruddick vs. Laura Ella Ruddick was called in the Decatur Circuit Court this morning. Mrs. Ruddick is well known in Seymour, having lived here several years ago. The trial promises to be most sensational, as this is their seventh attempt to break their matrimonial bonds. The husband in his complaint charges much cruelty. Mrs. Ruddick in a cross-complaint alleges unfaithfulness, and demands alimony in the sum of $25,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruddick have been twice married and since their last divorce case, at which no decree of divorce was granted, the husband inherited a fortune estimated at more than $100,000.

PLAYS IN LONDON

Louis Persinger, Violinist, Receives European Approval.

Louis Persinger, a nephew of I. N. Persinger of Brownstown, who has attracted the attention of musicians in Europe as a violinist, gave a series of recitals in London last week which have received the approval of the best of European artists.

Mr. Persinger is the son of A. W. Persinger, who formerly lived in Jackson county. For many years he has lived in Colorado Springs, Colorado. The young artist has studied in Germany and has lived the greater part of his life abroad. In a short time he will return to this country and will give a series of recitals. He will spend a few days at Cincinnati and a number of his friends from this country will hear him there.

Speaking of his recital at London a dispatch says:

Not for a long time has the London debut of a violinist attracted such attention as that of Louis Persinger, a young American, who gave the first of three recitals in Bechstein Hall.

Persinger, who was a favorite pupil of Ysaye and also studied with Thibaud, arrived here unheralded, although he had met with considerable success on the continent. After the concert he awoke to find himself famous, all the London critics agreeing that he is in the very first flight of violinists, the Daily Telegraph going so far as to say:

"Not since Sarasate have we heard violin playing more neat in the right hand or more masterly in the bow hand."

Persinger, who came from Colorado in the spring, arrived in London with a limited wardrobe, intending to replenish it here, but, owing to the tailors' strike, it was impossible to obtain clothes. In consequence he had to play in a thick winter suit, which, with the excessive heat experienced here, made his success all the more creditable, although he looked as if he had been swimming before the end of the recital.

In Memory.

Elizabeth A. Martin, who died at her home in Seymour, at 10 a. m., Friday, May 17, 1912, aged 39 years, 8 months and 6 days. She was sick nine weeks with grippe and fever but her death was not expected until the morning of the fatal day.

She was the daughter of James E. and Mary A. Hunter, born in Harrison county, near Martinsburg, September 11, 1872, where her girlhood days were spent, learning life's early duties and making sunshine and pleasure in a happy home. She was united in marriage to Charles G. Martin of Borden, on the 26th day of October 1899. To this union were born two children, both dying in infancy. In the spring of 1904 they moved to Seymour where her home had since been.

She leaves besides her husband, a mother, Mrs. Mary A. Hunter of Reddington, one sister, Mrs. Clark B. Davis, of Seymour, two brothers, Dr. Chas. A. Hunter of Reddington, and Otto W. Hunter of Seymour, a large number of relatives and a host of friends as evidenced by the many acts of kindness, words of comfort, the beautiful floral offerings and the following to her last resting place.

While a young girl she united with the church of Christ at Martinsburg, and lived a faithful christian life. She was devoted to her home, always doing something that would add cheer and comfort thereto. A helpmate to a husband that can not be replaced, a mother to her little niece, Ruth V. Hunter, whom she raised from infancy. She was always thoughtful of others, and possessed a happy, cheerful disposition, always having a pleasant word for all, and her presence was one of cheerfulness, happiness and pleasure.

Knowing that her life must soon close, she said, it would be a pleasure to live for husband, her home, and to help care for her dear mother in her old days, but that she had lived for Christ and that she was happy in dying in that Christian faith. She was conscious to the last moment and as each relative and friend went to her bedside, she called them by name, bidding them goodbye, and asking each one to live for Christ as that is the only way to die happy.

Thus a young and useful life has returned to the One who gave it, and the heartfelt sympathies of all are extended to the husband, relatives and friends.

The funeral services were held at the late home at 711 North Ewing Street, Sunday, May 19, at 2 p. m. by Rev. A. F. Dalton of Bedford and her remains were laid to rest in River-view cemetery.

WHO SOLD THE BEER?

Four Boys With a Quantity of Brew Found Saturday Night.

Are the saloon keepers making a practice of selling intoxicating liquor to minors? This is a question that has been asked today as the result of the Saturday night occurrence in which the officers found four boys with a large bucket of beer. The lads, none of whom is over eighteen years of age, were found in the alley in the rear of the Bee Hive, and the evidence indicated that they were preparing to or had already partaken of the beer which was found in the pail.

The boys were immediately taken to the police station and every effort was made to ascertain from them where they had purchased their liquor, but the officers were unable to get any satisfactory answer. At first they denied the ownership of the bucket, but the police later found that it had been purchased a short time before by one of the boys at the Bee Hive store. Three of the boys admitted having "chipped in" 5 cents apiece to purchase the beer but refused to say who purchased it or from what saloon it was bought. The officers made inquiry at a number of the saloons and found that the liquor had probably been purchased from one of the places on Second street, although it was declared that a man had come with the bucket and it was not stated that it was to be given to the boys.

It is understood that the lads will be given another examination soon and the officers declare that they will make every effort possible to learn from what saloon the liquor was purchased and if the bar tender knew that it was to get into the hands of the boys.

There is considerable opposition to the saloonists disposing of liquor in this manner, and a large number of the citizens including several of the saloon keepers declare that they are willing to assist in any investigation which will result in the location of the guilty party.

One saloon keeper stated a short time ago that the majority of the saloonists were making every effort to follow the letter of the law, and while he thought that most of them were doing this, there may probably be a few who were guilty of law violations.

The boys were not arrested upon any charge as it was brought out in evidence that they had not drunk any of the liquor, but probably would have done so had the officers arrived there just a few minutes later. In the attempt to take the boys to the police station, the bucket of beer was overturned and much of it was spilled on the ground and the police were not able to learn just how much the bucket contained. Two of the boys stated that they had nothing to do with the transaction, but had by accident met the other two in the alley.

STANTON WINS

Twenty minutes after she left the course, the Mercury shot down it once more. By the time the grandstand was fully aware that "Stanton had got his again," and the ambulance had been hurled clanging to the scene of the possible tragedy, the Mercury whirled past the judges, running more comet-like than ever.

But Stanton took the turns conservatively; for him.

The race was lost. Even Stanton could not regain the half-hour lead given his competitors. Late in the fourth hour he signaled Floyd to lean closer, and when he was obeyed:

"Where's the Duplex?" he questioned eagerly.

"At its repair pit for the last hour," Floyd made hopeful answer. "An' there's only the Atlanta ahead of us."

Stanton shook his head, but let out his car a little faster.

The Mercury came across the line, at the finish, just five minutes behind the Atlanta; to receive fully as great an ovation as the winning car. The spectacular driving, the record of the fastest lap and highest speed ever made on that course, the second place won in spite of the accident, almost eclipsed the Atlanta's victory.

In the midst of the joyous tumult, Floyd descended, stiff and weary enough after the continuous run of five hours and fifty-eight minutes. But Stanton did not follow; leaning upon his steering-wheel, the focus of snapping cameras, curious crowds, and blended congratulations and sympathy. Only when one of the judges came over to shake hands, was the explanation made evident.

"If I am to get out, some one will have to help me," announced Stanton impassively, and unclasped his mask, baring a face gray with exhaustion under its coating of caked dust.

And, in fact, it was necessary to aid the cramped, over-taxed driver to dismount from his car; to the wonder of all those familiar with his usual superb endurance.

A little later Floyd, some of the grime removed, somewhat rested, and issuing from the ambulance surgeon's care with his arm bandaged in civilized fashion, felt a touch on his shoulder.

"I'm going to get out of this uproar," Stanton briefly imparted. "Come with me; send for your things and stay at my hotel tonight."

Floyd drew back, hesitating oddly.

Stanton's straight dark brows contracted.

"You mean that you don't want anything personal to do with your brute of a driver? Oh, say so."

"No, no! Only—I—"

The steel-keen eyes sent one direct glance into the troubled gray ones.

"Good-by," pronounced Stanton definitely, and turned on his heel.

"Stanton!" cried Floyd, in distress. The other kept on, unheeding.

"Stanton!" Floyd appealed, overtaking him. "Please—I give you my word I never meant that. I've got to be back at my own hotel, tonight, that was all. I'll do anything you say."

Stanton slowly halted.

"Will you come with me now, to dinner? Suit yourself."

"I'd like to," was the humble surrender. Like a woman, Floyd yielded to a superior will; like a man, there were no small reservations in his yielding.

There was a taxicab waiting; to it Stanton led the way.

The destination was one of the large hotels of the city, and neither of the companions were dressed for the public dining-room. In the guest-crowded lobby Stanton paused to order dinner sent to his own apartment, perfectly indifferent to the sensation caused by their entrance.

"You are unwell, sir?" the clerk ventured, regarding him wide-eyed.

"No," he denied laconically.

But he looked far more fatigued than his comparatively frail mechanic, nevertheless. Fatigued, and ill.

"You didn't hurt yourself in our upset, I hope," Floyd said with anxiety, when they were alone in the stiff, impersonal hotel room.

"No. I had a bad night of it," Stanton explained. He sat down in an arm-chair, resting his head against the cushioned back. "Make yourself comfortable as you can, Floyd. There is nothing the matter with me—there can't be, I never was sick a day since I can remember. Probably I need feeding; I've eaten nothing since that confounded dinner last evening, and it is nearly six o'clock now."

But, after all, when the food was brought, Stanton could eat none of it; although maintaining a pretense of doing so, which forbade his companion to comment upon the fact.

"Were you feeling ill yesterday?" Floyd inquired, when the last course was removed and they were left to themselves. His own bearing was less assured than usual, his gaiety subdued to quietness almost savoring of timidity.

"Not until evening, after dinner," the mechanic looked at him.

started to speak, checked himself, and at last impulsively put the indiscreet question:

"Do you mind telling me where you dined?"

"Of course not," Stanton returned, without a trace of hesitation. "With Mr. Carlisle of the tire Company, and his daughter. They are here for the races. He wanted to talk tires to me, Heaven knows why. We didn't get very far; after Miss Carlisle left us I began to feel so sick that I excused myself and got away to the nearest doctor."

Floyd turned his head, and caught his breath in a brief, quick sigh. When he looked back at his host, his candid eyes were clearer and more gentle than they had been since the assistant manager had given the account of Stanton's amazing disappearance.

"Acute indigestion, your doctor called your attack?"

"Something like it."

"Miss Carlisle doesn't seem to be a lucky companion," Floyd observed dryly. "She made you miss your train here, you came near breaking your wrist with her car, and her dinner seems to have poisoned you. What did she give you, lobster and ice-cream?"

"No—I hardly know. I never care what I eat." He passed his hand impatiently across his forehead, suddenly giddy.

Floyd leaned nearer.

"Stanton, how did you feel? What? Tell me; I'm not just curious."

"Nausea, violent successive attacks of seasickness that left me too weak to stand. I've got the headache yet."

His voice died out; he had a vague impression of Floyd starting up and coming toward him.

"I had to make the doctor steady me with some drug so I could race," he resumed abruptly. "I'm brute enough without that in me, Floyd."

"Hush, try to rest," urged his mechanic's earnest young voice across the mist.

"I'm tired," he conceded.

It seemed to him a long time afterward that a sensation of exquisite coolness extinguished the flame-like pain binding his temples, although the rich sunset glow was still in the room when he opened his eyes. Floyd was bending over him, bathing his forehead with light, firm touches. Stanton's savage irritability of a strong man.

"What a position for you and me! What will you do for me—the engine is shaking loose from the chassis, by the feeling? Get your tools."

"Don't try to talk. I have sent for a doctor," soothed Floyd. "You are all right. Here," a hand was slipped behind his head, a glass of water held to his lips. "Drink this."

"You might have been a nurse," Stanton wandered dreamily. "Your sister couldn't do better. And you're so nonsensically good-looking! Floyd," the feverishly brilliant eyes flashed wide, "what is your sister's name?"

"Jessica."

"Jesse—Jessica?"

"We are twins; I told you that. They named us so purposely."

The heavy white bandage encircling his mechanic's left arm caught the patient's falling attention.

"You've had a bad day; go home and rest," gasped Stanton the brute, before things slipped from his ken.

CHAPTER VII.

The Girl Like Floyd.

Stanton awoke slowly, with a consciousness of physical well-being and singular restfulness. The shades of his room were lowered, but the dazling sunshine streamed in around edges and through cracks, glittering over a nearby table covered with yellow telegrams, cards, newspapers, hotel memoranda of telephone calls received—all the familiar evidences of the morning after a race. And in the midst of the litter stood an ice-water pitcher containing a mass of pale-yellow roses. Stanton frowned and looked about him for a bell.

Some one rose from a corner and approached the bed.

"Better, sir?" queried a businesslike voice; a distinctly medical young man in glasses gazed down at him.

The full situation came clearly to Stanton.

"All right," he gave brief assurance. "What time is it?"

The young man consulted a watch. "Thirty-eight minutes past twelve. You have slept about eighteen hours, as I figure it. I told Mr. Floyd that was all you needed; you were knocked out by that attack of illness, followed by a day's work that was enough to exhaust a horse. I saw you race, yesterday."

"Where is Floyd?"

"He stayed here until midnight, and you had been sleeping like a baby for five hours. He was nearly all in, himself, but he wouldn't leave until he was sure you were all right. One of the nicest fellows I ever met. He made me promise to stay with you. I," with an expansive smile, "I have got more time than patients, as yet. Here, all this junk came for you, on the table. I have answered seventeen telephone calls and sent off twelve posies in the water-jug. All right?"

"All right, and much obliged," Stanton affirmed, beguiled into smiling, while he glanced casually at the table.

"There isn't any one I am in a hurry to see or hear from. I think I will get up; it's breakfast time."

"I think so. Considering it is your first meal for thirty-six hours, I'll order for you. Although I fancy you could digest a rubber tire; you look it. Oh, Mr. Floyd left a note."

Stanton rose to his elbow.

"Where is it?" demanded the man who cared to hear from no one.

It was a short note on the hotel stationery, written in a wide-open, legible hand that somehow recalled Floyd's direct gray eyes.

"Dear Stanton: The doctor says you are only tired; and I have got to be in New York by morning. I would not leave you if I could do as I wanted. I hope you will believe that.

"Cordially,"

"JESSE FLOYD."

The letter might have been written by a girl, for its reticence and lack of the personal element, but Stanton was well content. It rang right. He felt vigorously alive and amazingly hungry.

While he was breakfasting, or lunching, and reading the heap of correspondence—which commenced with a congratulatory telegram from the Mercury Company and concluded with a request for his photograph to be used as a speedometer advertisement—Stanton decided upon his course. He would obtain Floyd's address from Mr. Green, and pay a visit of acknowledgment to his impromptu nurse, upon reaching New York. That much was required by ordinary courtesy, at least.

"Got any enemies?" inquired the doctor when taking leave.

"Are you asking for a list of my acquaintances?" Stanton ironically responded.

"Well, I don't want to play detective, but that was a funny kind of indigestion you had, according to Mr. Floyd's account. Some of the other racers might have wanted to keep you out of the way."

"No! Do you think you are talking of horse-traders? Once for all, there is nothing like that done."

Which was very true. But after the subdued medical man had departed, the jug of yellow roses caught Stanton's eye. A card was dangling from the stems, a card, blank this time, except for a pencilled legend:

"So glad you were able to race, but so sorry you lost to the Atlanta."

There was no need of signature. Stanton very carefully tore the card into illegible fragments, dragged out the flowers to fling them into the arid fireplace, and rang the bell.

"Bring fresh ice-water," he bade the bell-boy who appeared. "And a time-table for New York."

However, he did not leave Lowell that day, detained by Mr. Green with a score of appointments and arrangements. Nor was it until two days later that he found himself free to seek the address in upper New York which he had wrested from the reluctant assistant manager.

"Floyd asked me not to give it to people," Mr. Green had protested.

"Did he ask you not to give it to me?"

"No, but—"

"Very good; I am not people."

"Don't you see him enough at race times, Stanton? I'm sure he is the best man we have had," fretted his manager.

Stanton was recalling that interview as he went up the stairs of the quiet apartment house indicated. After all, it was true that Floyd might have volunteered his address, himself, if he had wished it known. Perhaps he did not want to see his driver unofficially. A sense of unwelcomeness oppressed Stanton, but he kept on his way. He had never swerved from a course because of the opinions of others; he did not think of turning back now.

Some one was singing, as he reached the fourth floor; singing in a smooth, honey-rich, honey-golden contralto. Warned of his approach by the bell pushed below, the door of the apartment was opened, so that the melody came flooding his hearing with its haunting familiarity. A little old Irishwoman in black silk was peering up at the tall visitor on the threshold.

"Mr. Floyd?" he inquired. "My name is Stanton."

The old servant drew back, smiling invitation, and pushed aside a curtain. And Stanton saw Jessica Floyd rise from her seat at the piano, taking a step to meet him.

She was so like Floyd that he could have cried out in wonder, yet was most purely and softly feminine. She seemed taller, in her clinging pale-blue gown, and even more slender, but Floyd's silver-gray eyes looked out from her long lashes, Floyd's bronze curls clustered around her wide brows, under the braided wound about her head, and her smile was a more timid reflection of the incarnate sunshine of his.

"I am sorry Jess is not at home," she said, holding out her hand with a natural grace of hospitality that rose above her nervous shyness. "I am Jessica Floyd, Mr. Stanton, his sister."

She was afraid of him. The too obvious fact struck deep into Stanton, as he felt her fingers flutter in his clasp. So this was the reputation he had earned for himself?

"Perhaps I should not have come," he apologized quite humbly. "I—Floyd gave me no warrant for it. But he was very good to me, when I was sick in Lowell, and I wanted to thank him."

She looked at him fully, then, and again he could have cried out at the wonder of so meeting Floyd's straight candor of regard.

"Why should you not come? Jess has not so many friends that they are not welcome in his home. Only, if he had known of your coming, he would have been here."

She moved to a chair, inviting him by a gesture to do likewise, and took up a half-embroidered silk scarf.

"He was called out of town," she added, after waiting for her silent guest to speak. "He will be sorry to have missed you. From Mr. Green he learned that you had quite recovered, after he left you."

"And he? I hurt his arm."

She glanced up astonished.

"You hurt his arm?"

"I was driving the car," Stanton assumed grim responsibility.

This time she laughed, two adorable dimples starting into view in her cheeks of glowing rose-and-amber velvet; not the complexion of a blonde beauty, nor of a brunette, but some happy intermediate tint that presupposed flawless health and much sunlight. Stanton had never observed any dimples about his mechanician.

"I am certain Jess never thought of that standpoint. He said a turn and a tire were to blame. But his arm is almost well."

She spoke so lightly, with so much of Floyd's own nonchalant acceptance of incidental mishaps, that Stanton was surprised into indiscretion.

"You do not worry about him?" he questioned. "You are not nervous about his racing, and racing with me?"

Her lashes fell, her face grew serious.

"If anything happens to Jess, I will die too," she slowly answered. "We are—twins. No, I do not worry. Besides, I grew up used to seeing Jess in danger; he told you of his life with father?"

"Yes."

"Well, he never had time to be afraid, or I to be afraid for him. You can not be afraid of things you have been doing or seeing done ever since you could understand at all. As ordinary babies are taken out in carriages, Jess was taken out in fast motor-cars. My father could not bear him out of his sight; when Jess was in kilts, he was taken to the factory each day to amuse himself among the workmen and machines."

Profoundly interested, he studied her.

"And you, Miss Floyd? What did you do?"

"I?" she turned aside her head, her full, firm young mouth slightly compressed. "When I was fourteen, I said to my father, one morning, 'Daddy, what is to become of Jessica? Jess is learning all he needs to be a man; how is Jess's sister to learn to be a woman?' And he answered me frankly, 'Jessica, I do not know. You have no kinswomen, and I could not endure a stranger in your mother's house. You will have to let Jess be wise for both, except for your nurse's woman-teaching.' So I—did. Jess is Jess and Jessica for both. You are the first visitor who ever followed him here, and the first I ever received in New York. We are like no one else in the world, I believe."

"You are never lonely?" he wondered.

Her answer he never quite forgot; long afterward its quiet pathos would come back to him.

"Often," she said, and picked up the embroidery.

Stanton was not always gentle, but he had tact enough when he chose to exert it. With a natural change of tone he moved away from personalities, speaking of the race and the race pictures in the pile of newspapers near her. And she responded with charming readiness and understanding.

"Will your brother be home tonight?" Stanton inquired, when he rose to go, at the end of a half hour.

"No," she regretted, a trifle hurriedly.

He hesitated, in the grasp of an impulse strange to himself.

"I am alone in the crowd, too," he rejoined. "If I thought Floyd would not object, or feel that I took advantage of his absence, I should ask if you would do me so much honor as to go to the theater with me, this evening."

Her gray eyes widened, the color flushed through her transparent skin. Suddenly and vividly Stanton was reminded of Floyd's face on the first night when he invited the mechanician to race with him for the season.

"You are asking me?" she doubted.

"I would like to do so. But not if you think Floyd would refuse to let me, if he were here. He can't have much of an opinion of me."

"I wish I might tell you what Jess thinks of you," she made grave answer. "I am quite sure that he would let me go with you, Mr. Stanton; you are very good and I thank you from the bottom of my heart."

The little old Irishwoman in black silk opened the door for him, beaming and smiling. Amazed at himself, bewildered by a sense of having seen Floyd and yet not seen him, Stanton went down into the practical city street.

He spent two hours in selecting an irrefragable play and theater; a task of some delicacy in this his native town. After which, he ate a perfunctory dinner and went home to dress. Stanton, whose overbearing willfulness spared no one, whose rough tongue hurt his mechanician as often as they met, would no more have taken Floyd's sister to dine with him in a public restaurant without Floyd's permission, than he would have stolen his purse.

It was a dazzling Jessica whom he found waiting for him, at the appointed hour. Yet she was simply gowned in delicate gray, with a demure lace collar that came up to her round chin, and long lace sleeves. It was her vivid, expressive face; the bronze curls massed under the wide gray hat, the splendid glow and young vitality of her, that made people look and look again. Stanton approved of her unreservedly; he had fixed masculine notions of what women should wear in public places.

On her left arm, over the transparent sleeve, she wore an antique silver bracelet fully four inches in breadth; a singular ornament, set with dull turquoise matrix. When Stanton assisted her to remove her cloak, at the theater, she suddenly winced.

"The bracelet—it caught my arm," she explained, before he could question. "It is too heavy, really, to wear."

But nevertheless, she did not take it off, and several times through the evening-touched her gloved finger to the silver band as if to assure herself that it was in place. A souvenir, perhaps, Stanton idly reflected. He was too much interested in the wearer to pay heed to the bracelet. Except for the hours passed with Floyd, he had never experienced anything like this satisfying companionship.

The performance had ended, and Stanton was carefully piloting his charge through the slow-moving mass of people, when he heard his own name exclaimed. He glanced around, and saw Valerie Carlisle coming down the stairs from the boxes, her large, amber eyes fixed upon him. Under the strong light, in her elaborate pale-green gown, her shoulders bare and showing satin-white where her cloak had slipped back, her blonde hair circled with a wreath of green enameled and jeweled leaves, she was conspicuous enough to draw the glances of all those passing, as well as that of the man she called. Stanton bowed and would have continued on his way, but she called a second time, adding a gesture of summons.

"Mr. Stanton!"

Evidently she expected him to excuse himself momentarily from his companion, as she had moved a few steps from her father and the younger gentleman who accompanied her. But Stanton's eyes glinted cold resistance of the attempt at command. He deliberately retained Jessica's hand upon his arm and, since he must go, led her with him.

"You called me, Miss Carlisle?" he questioned. "Miss Floyd, let me introduce Miss Carlisle."

The two women bowed without effusiveness, Valerie Carlisle scrutinizing Jessica with an acute attention that seized every detail of her appearance.

"Miss Floyd, have we met?" she puzzled. "Pardon, it seems so to me."

"Probably you have met my twin brother," Jessica suggested, gravely self-possessed. "He is much with Mr. Stanton."

There was a shock of antagonism in their meeting gaze, as there had been between Floyd and this girl when he had seen her in the railroad depot on the way to Lowell. Miss Carlisle turned to Stanton, enlightened.

"Oh, your mechanician; I remember."

"My friend and mechanician, yes," he affirmed.

"Ah? But I am detaining you—I merely wished to ask if you had quite recovered from your illness. When you left us that night, I never imagined you would try to race next morning. And you should not have done so, it seemed to me an accident."

He opened his lips to deny that his illness had caused the Mercury's mishap, then paused. If he had not felt the average irritability of a strong man sick, would he have quarreled with Floyd and taken his car around the turn at such ruinous speed? He did not know.

"I am perfectly well, thank you," he answered, instead.

"Indeed, I am glad. Will you not come to see us soon—you owe us a dinner call, you know."

He did not echo her delicately expectant smile, his dark face hard.

"You must believe my appreciation of the dinner without that formality, Miss Carlisle. I start for Indiana in a few days," he regretted.

Her amber eyes also hardened, suddenly and strangely; she moved a step to retire, catching up her trailing lengths of satin and lace.

"As you will, of course. Ah; we found out what car wins when you are taken from a race, Mr. Stanton, as at Lowell. And you judged wrong—it was not the Duplex, but the Atlanta. Good night."

Stanton looked after her, amazed, then abruptly turned his eyes to the frank, steadfast face of Jessica Floyd.

"Come out in the fresh air," he requested. "That perfume she wears smothers one."

"Sandalwood," interpreted Jessica, turning; she had her brother's habit of instantly obeying a suggestion. And as they emerged: "May I say something interfering and impertinent?"

"What right have I to object to anything said to me? I show small grace to others."

"Then, pray do not go near Miss Carlisle just before a race."

He stopped short on the sidewalk.

"You know—what you think—"

"I know only what Jess knows," she declared. "But I think that Miss Carlisle is not good for your racing. Some people are naturally unlucky influences, perhaps."

Stanton shook his head, unbeguiled by the pleasantry.

"I understand what Floyd believes, but it is impossible, absurd. Besides, it is to her interest for me to win; the Mercury uses her father's tires."

"Yes," agreed Jessica impersonally.

When he left her, in the faintly lighted hall before the door of her apartment, she drew off her glove with a swift movement.

"My father used to say that one only offered a covered hand to an enemy," she said half playful, half serious. "Good night."

There was a tinkling crash, before he could reply. Stanton bent and recovered her wide silver bracelet, shaken loose by her rapid gesture of the previous moment.

"May I put it on?" he asked.

But she held out her hand for the trinket; in the dim light he could have imagined that she had become suddenly agitated and hurried.

"No, it is too heavy," she declined. "Good night, I have enjoyed this evening very much."

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.

Genuine Merit Required to Win the People's Confidence.

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been cured, to those who are in need of it.

In an interview on the subject a prominent local druggist says: "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend for in almost every case it shows immediate results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy that I know of has so large a sale."

The success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact that it fulfills every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder diseases, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

A free trial bottle will be sent by mail, absolutely free. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention this paper. Regular size bottle sold at all druggists—50c and $1.00.

For Women Who Care

Of course you use an antiseptic in your family and in the care of your own person, and you want the best.

Instead of what you have been using such as liquid or tablet antiseptics or peroxide, won't you please try Paxtine, a concentrated antiseptic powder to be dissolved in water as needed.

Paxtine is more economical, more cleansing, more germicidal and more healing than anything you ever used.

In the toilet—to cleanse and whiten the teeth, remove tartar and prevent decay. To disinfect the mouth, destroy disease germs, and purify the breath. To keep artificial teeth and bridgework clean and odorless. To remove nicotine from the teeth and purify the breath after smoking. To eradicate perspiration odors by sponge bathing.

As a medicinal agent for local treatment of feminine ills where pelvic catarrh, inflammation and ulceration exist, nothing equals hot douches of Paxtine. For ten years the Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co. has been regularly advising their patients to use it because of its extraordinary cleansing, healing and germicidal power. For this purpose alone Paxtine is worth its weight in gold. Also for nasal catarrh, sore throat, inflamed eyes, cuts and wounds. All druggists, 25 and 50 cents a box. Trial box and testimony of 31 women free on request.

HE SAYS HE HAS THE DELEGATES

Taft Expresses Certainty of the Nomination.

ORGANIZATION BEHIND HIM

Not Only Has the Delegates A Sufficient Number of Delegates Already Assured to Give Him the Coveted Plum at Chicago, but the Republican Organization Will Stand by Him, He Tells the Jerseyites.

Hoboken, May 25.—The crowds that greeted the president on his second day in New Jersey were noticeably larger and more enthusiastic than those that turned out on Thursday. His reception in several counties was unusually warm. He put more fire and life into his utterances, urging Republican voters to safeguard the country against "the Roosevelt menace," and reiterated repeatedly that he has the nomination in Chicago—that he has a sufficient number of delegates and the Republican organization will stand by him.

The president was more pointed in his attacks on Colonel Roosevelt. In one or two of them he seemed to intimate that it is more important to the country that Roosevelt should be defeated at Chicago than the Republican party should be returned to power next November. In these intimations the president, of course, had in mind Roosevelt's veiled threat to bolt in the event of Taft being named for president.

Claims of Taft Leaders.

Assurances which the Taft leaders in New Jersey brought to the president may have had something to do with the more spirited character of his campaign. They told Mr. Taft that they were counting on carrying at least seven of the twelve congressional districts and that they also had hopes of landing the delegates-at-large.

A considerable flurry was caused in Republican camps in New Jersey through the circulation of a report that the president at a luncheon at State Senator Freylinghausen's home near Somerset, had said that he had the delegates and would be nominated provided money was not used. The president, when his attention was called to this story, denied vigorously that he had made any reference to money.

BIG OVATION

Jersey Continues to Give the Colonel a Warm Welcome.

Camden, N. J., May 25.—Theodore Roosevelt's march through New Jersey is a continued triumph. Big enthusiasm opened it Thursday and yesterday enthusiasm burst out into a wave of popular acclaim. The whole of the south land of the state were out in the roadways and the farm houses, in the streets of the towns and the lawns of their houses, in the villages, baseball parks and fair grounds, waving flags, dressed in their best, cheering with a gaiety that sparkled. The colonel in his nomination campaign has received nothing like it.

As far as Jersey's vote for the colonel next Tuesday is concerned, he has got it already, these crowds said. Former Governor Fort, who is in the Roosevelt party and a hot rooster, declared that in his forty years' political experience in the state, he had not seen such a tremendous ovation.

The colonel left New York at 9 o'clock in the morning and started his campaign at Burlington, travelled on through Hammonton and Egg Harbor to Atlantic City. The coast resort mobbed and piled about him, thronged him, on the million-dollar pier, and when the colonel was finally pulled and hauled by his audience through the fighting, jostling crowds, he looked wilted for once and his collar had well nigh disappeared. From Atlantic City he went to Millville in his special train, from there going by automobile most of the way through the farming and grape-growing region of Vineland, Bridgeton, Glassboro and Woodbury to Camden. He spoke at the armory in Camden, to another great throng, and finished up the day with a speech at Trenton at 9:30 in the evening.

Young Girl Captures Intruder.

Grand Junction, Col., May 25.—Pearl Hopp, aged eighteen, forced a tramp caught peeping through her window to walk at the point of a revolver for a quarter of a mile, where he was turned over to the police.

Foster Honored by Presbyterians. Louisville, Ky., May 25.—Just before the adjournment of the 124th general assembly of the Presbyterian church, John W. Foster, formerly of Evansville, who was secretary of state in the cabinet of President Benjamin Harrison, and who has held other high official positions, was chosen to go to the Pan-Presbyterian council in Aberdeen, Scotland, next year, in place of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, whose selection for that honor was disapproved by the assembly.

The national subscription for a German aerial fleet has reached a million.

CHEAPER MONEY FOR AMERICAN FARMERS

President Taft Would Adopt the European Plan.

Washington, May 25.—The object of an investigation recently undertaken by the state department through five of its ambassadors in Europe is cheaper money for the borrowing American farmer.

In America the farmer today pays a higher rate of interest for his money, proportionate to the security which he offers in his farm land mortgage, than almost any other class of investors in the country. In Europe the farmer borrows on equal terms with the biggest railroad, industrial corporation or municipality.

President Taft wants to introduce the European system in this country, so that the American farmer can raise money on his farm through a bond salable in any part of the country. Cheap money, thinks Mr. Taft, will put it in the power of the small farmer or the tenant who wants to start out for himself, to get his farm on a paying basis without shouldering a staggering burden at the outset.

President Taft is optimistic that in this plan he can give the investor a safe place for his money and at the same time apply that money in the development of what he considers one of the most important industries to which the United States owes protection today.

An Unprecedented Suit.

New York, May 25.—The hearing in the government suit against the so-called coffee trust marks the beginning of a case which, if the position of the complainants is sustained, is without precedent. The hearing is to enable the defendants to show cause why an injunction should not be issued restraining them from disposing of 950,000 bags of coffee, stored in a local warehouse, pending further court action in the government fight against the money trust.

Hawaiians Are in Terror.

Honolulu, May 25.—The island of Hawaii was shaken by the severest earthquake experienced in years. Wireless advices report Mauna Loa smoking. There is great excitement here and throughout the islands. Many residents are preparing to flee to places of safety if there is a recurrence of the earth tremors or if Mauna Loa becomes active.

Fifty Years Ago Today. May 27.

General Fitz-John Porter's Federal command destroyed the bridges on the Virginia Central railroad at Hanover Court House, north of Richmond. This blow severed railway communication between Richmond and northern Virginia. General Branch's North Carolina brigade attacked Porter's columns, but was repulsed. Porter lost 400 men.

DE PAUW'S NEED

Methodist College Now Looking For a New President.

Greencastle, Ind., May 25.—The election of Francis J. McConnell as a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church automatically removes him as president of DePauw university, and Vice President Gobin is now the acting president. Dr. McConnell will be the nominal head of the institution until his affairs are arranged. The matter of selecting a new president will be taken up at the next regular meeting of the board of trustees, June 12, when a committee will be appointed for the purpose. The school officials have no one in mind as a possible successor to Mr. McConnell, but they will lose no time in making a search for an available man of the necessary qualifications.

S.S.S. REMOVES BLOOD HUMORS

Every pore and gland of the skin is employed in the necessary work of preserving its smooth, even texture, softening and cleansing it and regulating the temperature of our bodies. This is done by an evaporation through each tiny outlet, which goes on continually day and night. When the blood becomes infected with humors and acids a certain percentage of these impurities also pass off with the natural evaporation, and their sour, fiery nature irritates and inflames the skin, and dries up its natural oils, causing pimples, boils, pustules or some itching rash, or hard, scaly skin affection. S.S.S. cures skin troubles of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. S.S.S. cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to its normal strength and thickness, multiplies its nutritious, red corpuscles, and enriches it in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated and diseased by the exuding acid matter, is nourished, soothed and softened by this cooling, healthy stream of blood. S.S.S., the greatest of blood purifiers, expels all foreign matter and surely cures Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Salt Rheum and all other diseases and affections of the skin. It removes pimples, blackheads, and other unsightly blemishes from the skin and assists in restoring a good complexion. Book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice desired free to all who write.

TALE OF 2 JEWELRY STORES

One Merchant Lost Business and Closed Up While the Other Prospered and Became Famous.

Once upon a time a man rented a store and stocked it with fake jewelry. Then he bought large advertising space in the city papers and printed big advertisements of the jewelry he had for sale. And people came and bought and went away, but did not come again. And they said nothing to their neighbors about the jewelry they had bought, for they were ashamed of it. But some were wroth and made much talk to everyone they met, and called the merchant hard names, and threatened to do him bodily injury because of the worthless jewelry he had sold them. But others, not knowing of this, saw the advertisements and came and bought and went away and joined the company of knockers. And so it happened that when there were sufficient knockers the merchants business languished and he closed his store and departed for parts unknown.

But another merchant offered good jewelry at fair prices, and few bought of him. But they came back. And some told their friends and neighbors of the good jewelry they had bought and where they had bought it. And they were not ashamed. So it happened that when the knockers became numerous, and the knockers few, the merchant's trade waxed great and he prospered exceedingly and his name became famous throughout the land. And men said, faith (based on advertising) without works (service) is dead.—American Artisan and Hardware Record.

GOOD STATIONERY IMPORTANT

Poorly Printed Letter Heads Give Poor Opinion of Business House Which Sends It Out.

Purely practical men affect a disdain for anything that deals in such high-sounding terms as "psychological influence," etc.

Yet it is a very real and known quantity, especially in business.

You never read an ad. or a business letter without coming under this "psychological influence."

You may not know it. You only know you like or dislike the proposition or the person behind the letter or the ad.—even before you know what the letter or the ad. says. You are affected by the "atmosphere" of the letter or ad.—by its general visual form—by the "psychological influence."

When you get a cheap, poorly printed business letter you are instantly impressed with a poor opinion of the firm or person that sent it. Maybe you don't even read the letter—you don't know anything about the standing of the firm or person or the importance of the proposition it contains. The cheap effect gives you a cheap opinion.

And the reverse is generally true when you get a letter printed or engraved in an attractive manner on good stock. You think that a firm or person must be one of influence to use such stationery may be of higher standing than the latter. But the better stationery gives the latter the advantage.

A man one time a good thing had
Which people would have prized;
But he never sold a single one,
For he never advertised.

GRANDMOTHER'S HERBS

Almost every American man or woman can recall the collection of roots, herbs and barks made every fall for the home medicine chest.

It is interesting to note that the most successful remedy for female ills the world has ever known had its origin nearly forty years ago in one of these home medicine chests and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made today in immense quantities from these same roots and herbs with extreme accuracy, care and cleanliness. Merit alone could have stood this test of time.

Prices cut one half. Don't miss your chance to get a bargain at the Day Light Dry Goods Store.

Lunched in Forbidden Room.

There is a lunch room in the city where only the gentler sex are permitted to satisfy their appetites. It is run by women exclusively and no man dare enter there. This is a strictly enforced rule and when a group of young bloods went to the top of the Wyoming building to try and get a meal they were politely shown the exit.

But one of their number was not discouraged. He meant to lunch there, and bets were put up on all sides that he could not "slip it over."

On the day named, a tottering old lady hobbled into the room. Her eyes were concealed by dark glasses and she was heavily veiled. It would have been an astonished waitress who could have seen her customer later whisk nimbly in a taxi to the rooms of his friends and was rewarded with his justly earned winnings.—Kate Russell, in the Denver News.

European 24-Hour Clocks.

Visitors in Belgium will have noticed the 24-hour clocks which are to be seen in public places and railways. The same system is in vogue in Italy, and both in Germany and Switzerland there is to be found a considerable number of persons in favor of this new notation. French military authorities also prefer the system, as do two-thirds of the consuls general and four-fifths of the chambers of commerce. In view of this opinion, M. Augagneur, the minister of posts and telegraphs, has addressed a letter to prefects announcing that during the summer the 0 to 24 system will be introduced on the main lines of the railways, and inviting the prefects to take measures to equip the local lines in the same way.

Need More Frills.

A pretty close observer of men and things says that it is just barely possible that more people would do their perfectly plain duty if only it had a few more frills on it.

ROYALIST REVOLT

Affairs Swiftly Moving to Restore Manuel to the Throne.

London, May 27.—The condition of Portugal is again the subject of more or less alarmist dispatches. The Standard's Lisbon correspondent describes the country as a seething volcano of political corruption, petty tyranny, monarchical conspiracies and active preparations for an early revolt against the republic which many of its erstwhile supporters admit has utterly failed.

All Portugal knows, says this correspondent, that a royalist revolt with a view of restoring King Manuel, is imminent.

Other dispatches report serious rioting at Oporto in connection with the trial there of the royalist conspirators. Several persons were wounded by the explosion of bombs.

TOWN'S SERIOUS LOSS

Rossville Hard Hit by a $50,000 Fire in Business District.

Rossville, Ind., May 27.—The site occupied by four of the best business buildings here holds a smoldering pile of rubbish.

With the buildings went practically their entire contents, involving a total loss estimated at $50,000. The I. O. O. F. and K. of P. buildings, the finest and most expensive structures in the town, were destroyed.

Three of the leading business firms were wiped out of existence and their entire stocks of goods destroyed. All of the property of the two lodges was lost, including all records and equipment.

Will Take Him Back.

Indianapolis, May 27.—Governor Marshall has issued a requisition for the return of Arthur Voliva from Zion City, Ill., to the state reformatory at Jeffersonville, where he is wanted for violation of his parole. Voliva is the brother of Wilbur Glenn Voliva, now head of the Dowle church at Zion City, according to the statement of the agent from the reformatory, who will bring Voliva back to Indiana. Voliva was sentenced from Fountain county for a forgery of a check for $250. He was paroled July 2, 1903.

Whole Family Affected.

Michigan City, Ind., May 27.—Brooding over the sale of his farm to satisfy a judgment on a note for $700, for which he was security, Gus Radtke, fifty-five years old, was adjudged insane and held to await commitment to the hospital for the insane at Logansport. Both Radtke's wife and daughter became insane recently from the same cause, it is believed, and are now patients at Logansport.

Bondsmen Had to Settle.

Gary, Ind., May 27.—The $3,000 bond of former Alderman Anthony Bankus of Gary, who disappeared last November following his arrest for bribery in the Dean heating franchise, was ordered forfeited by Special Judge Van Fleet at Crown Point. A. F. Knotts, Sela Smith and T. W. Englehart, who acted as sureties on the bond, were compelled to settle with the court.

South American Wildcat Skins.

An importing firm recently received a shipment of tiger cat skins from Paraguay and the Argentine Republic, and placed alongside a lot of North American wildcat skins the difference in color and marking was very noticeable. Both animals are of about the same size, but the South American cat is covered with round black spots much like those of the leopard but smaller in size.

These spots contrast strongly with the surrounding fur, which is of a grayish white color, very different from the reddish color of the North American wildcat. The fur of the South American wildcat is not so thick as that of his North American cousin, but the skins are said to dress well and make good robes and rugs.—Fur News
